WATER IN CALIFORNIA - Stretching every drop

Water Crisis in California: What will you do as a local leader when the public raises concerns about increasing water rates and taxes as we also face water restrictions?

Do you understand enough to explain the situation to angry residents?

The punishing four-year drought is the worst in more than 1,200 years. Dry spells also jeopardize water quality in local water supplies. Parched landscapes fuel wildfires. Many civic leaders are struggling with serious threats to economic development, police services and public safety to pay for greater costs in managing water.

Join policy makers and water officials to discuss the drought's impact on the economy, public health, police and fire services, and to help shape a California water agenda for 2016.
